We all know that PTAs are a real force for good in our schools. They work hard to raise funds, support school events, forge good relationships between teachers and parents and engage the local community.

However being involved in a school PTA doesn't have to take up a lot of your time, if you don't want it to.

Chair

The role of Chair is really important. A good Chair will run meetings efficiently, gather views and give everyone a chance to have their say. They should make sure that committee members are familiar with the association's constitution, and aware of their roles and responsibilities as committee members.

It's a role that requires you to be organised and inclusive, as it will be your responsibility to prepare for meetings with the Secretary, invite committee members, parents and staff, suggest items for the agenda, delegate tasks and monitor their progress. You'll be the main link between the school and the committee, and will need to ensure the committee fulfils its role in respect of governance of the association, as set out in the constitution. You'll also be responsible for holding an AGM, and managing the election of committee members.

Secretary

The Secretary supports the Chair to build effective communication links between the school and the association. Amongst other duties, the Secretary is responsible for preparing for meetings, circulating agendas and minutes and keeping track of attendance and actions agreed.

You'll need to be organised and efficient. You'll also need to be a good listener, with the ability to identify key discussion points, actions and agreements at meetings, so that they can be accurately recorded in the minutes. It's also important for you to be calm, friendly and approachable.

Treasurer

The treasurer has an important role in leading the way when it comes to the control and management of PTA funds. It's worth remembering however, that all committee members have equal responsibility here. Treasurers ensure that accurate financial records are kept and best practice procedures are followed for counting money, banking and making payments.

Treasurers need to have a basic understanding of bookkeeping, so that they're able to accurately manage records of income and expenditure. They also require an eye for detail, especially when making up floats and collecting money from various stalls, and need to be a real team player. The role calls for an ability to remain calm during busy times. Rather than work in isolation, a treasurer will need to communicate regularly and clearly with the rest of the committee.

Committee Members

Beyond these three key roles, there will be many other roles that committee members can get involved in to help support various PTA activities and events.

Being part of the school PTA is highly rewarding. The reality is that every parent will have something to offer – you'll often find that the concerns many have about not possessing the right skills are unfounded.
